MR. GAGE'S FIRST ASSISTANT.

Private Secretary Vanderlip Promoted to That Position.

Secretary Gage has secured from the President the appointment of Frank A. Vanderlip as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury to succeed S. Wike.

Mr. Vanderlip has been the private secretary to Mr. Gage ever since the latter was appointed Secretary of the Treasury. In this trying position Mr. Vanderlip has shown extraordinary tact and executive ability, and has made himself so invaluable to the Secretary that Mr. Gage would under no circumstances permit a change if his personal inclinations were followed, but in Mr. Vanderlip it is assumed that he will have a very valuable Assistant Secretary and he will not let personal inclination stand in the way of Mr. Vanderlip's deserved promotion.

Frank A. Vanderlip was born in Aurora, Ill., in 1864. He is a graduate of the University of Illinois, and began life as manager of an investors' agency, in which capacity he laid the foundation for his financial training. In 1888 he became a reporter on the Chicago Tribune and soon after was made its financial editor, which position he filled very successfully for eight years, when he purchased a part interest in the Economist and became its editor.
